The panel will examine types of active and positive response to violence on national, international and neighborhood levels. David Hartsough will speak about his decades of experience with third party nonviolent intervention in conflict areas throughout the world. Community leaders from Dolores Mission Parish in Boyle Heights will discuss their creation of peacemaking programs and community empowerment in the Pico Aliso neighborhood of Los Angeles. We've recently come out of the bloodiest century in world history and today there seems to be no increase in peace. This forum seeks to offer a vision of constructive means to end violence.
